

Sandy Wiggins, Ed.D

Extension Specialist, Professional and Staff Development

Dr. Sandy Wiggins currently serves as the FCS Extension Specialist for Professional and Staff Development. Until recently, her innovative and scholarly responsibilities focused on health issues relating to indoor/outdoor air quality and environmental hazards. She provided statewide leadership for educational programs that addressed environmental concerns affecting children, individuals, families and communities. She was the state leader for NCCE Children's Environmental Health Partnership, Healthy Homes Program, Healthy Indoor Air Quality for America's Homes. She was co-founder and co-director of the NC Healthy Homes Training Center which serves the states of North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Dr. Wiggins was awarded a doctorate of education from NCSU with emphasis on Training and Staff Development. In her current position, she provides leadership for the Extension FCS New Field Faculty Orientation process, professional and staff development training for FCS Field Faculty and clientele, Professional Protocol in the Workplace training for NCCE and is the North Carolina Cooperative Extension Grievance Facilitator for NCSU and NCA&TSU Extension county faculty and staff. She enjoys hiking, sailing, interior design and being with family and friends.