Very Important Parent Parenting Class

Through funding made available from the National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Children, Youth and Family At-Risk Project, the Very Important Parents Curriculum and Program were developed. This curriculum is built on theoretical, research-based principles of parenting, relationship education, and life skill development and on two theories of instruction, component display theory and experiential learning.

The training covers:

- Developing parenting, relationship and life skills
- Cultivating child development and education skills
- Using technology to promote two-way communication between parents and child care providers
- Increasing parent knowledge about social media as a positive tool for parent education

This curriculum will be facilitated by Patti Snyder from the Stokes Cooperative Extension.
